REASONS FOR DESIGNATION

781 GOVERNOR'S ROAD

HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE

A school has occupied this site on the north side of Governor's Road since 1837.

The present brick structure was preceded by two frame buildings, erected in 1837 and 1853, respectively. The existing school building was built by Martin Hewitt, who later married Evelyn Davies, the first teacher in the school.

During the reign of Queen Victoria, her name was given to many schools in Ontario, and very likely was applied to the earlier buildings on this site.

The present Victoria School, built in 1916, was considered very modern at the time of its construction. It was built as a model school, with such features as indoor toilets, separate boys' and girls' entrances, a well-equipped kitchen, and tools for wood working classes, as well as a teacher's room.

The building functioned as a school, serving pupils in West Flamborough and Ancaster, until its closing in 1958. Since that time, it has been a private residence.

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE

The school is of red brick construction on a stone foundation.

It is striking for its symmetrical facade with matching front entrances. Each entrance is capped by an arched transom whose bricks are arranged in a lanceated design with the key pinions in white inverted at the apex.

Beneath the cottage roof, which was originally slate-covered, the eaves are decorated in wood carved design with modillions.

The large central windows are set off by pilasters of brick work. These are crowned by an end gable carried well above the school's hip roof.

Inset and centered in the gable end above the large windows is the name of the school and number of the section.

The front facade has been largely restored to its original appearance since modern additions were recently removed. The school was an integral part of the educational system in this area, and its historical importance is further valued for its interesting architectural features.

Designation:

The portions to be designated are the front facade of the building including the brick walls, windows, canopies, entrances, roof, and centre gable with stone insets.
